EMMY

How do you think it makes me feel to know that the only reason my mother wants to see me is to get me to fix a problem for her. You've never given me anything. This is the only thing I'm asking for. And what about you? I'd imagine the trouble you're facing is worse. Aren't you scared? These books that tell women to leave their marriages ... and they do ... and how is that good? How many women have left their husbands and children and gotten themselves into the same kind of trouble you're in right now? I actually think it's good to be stuck in a marriage -- that it's difficult to leave that actually makes people stick around and try -- because if things keep on going the way you say they should then what will that look like? A future where everyone is leaving each other is that really what you want?
